

Chess

The game of chess was introduced to the Muslim world by the Persians, who had imported it first from India. The game became widely popular among men and women because of its difficulty and intellectual challenge. Caliphs (rulers) would invite champions of the game to chess matches at their palaces. The Muslims continued to adapt and improve the game. Eventually they introduced chess to Europeans, who played it widely from the thirteenth century on.